A note from Art Education Division Chairperson Diana Korzenik:

The Art Education Division has recently received two grants for in-service teacher training workshops from the Kennedy Center's Alliance for the Arts.

The award sponsors in-service teacher training specifically in terms of collaboration between art teachers and regular classroom teachers, inclusion of children with special needs in the regular classroom, and vocational education. The workshops will focus on Team Collaboration for Visual Learning. (March 15) and Crafts as Basic Life Experiences (April 12). Each will meet in the Visual Learning Resource Center and thereby introduce teachers to this new facility.

Programs and Exhibitions Jottings

More Space, Inc. has received a grant of three thousand dollars from the City of Boston Youth Activities Commission for a demonstration project by Duke Amarnick, an MCA student, who will direct twelve teenagers in the creation of a hugh environmental painting on a wall in their Jamaica Plain neighborhood. A similar project which Duke completed several years ago was highly successful.

More Space, Inc. is a non-profit organization headed by Mr. Amarnick as Chairman and Director. The Board of Directors includes Allan Barnett, Sam Green and Virginia Gunter.

Virginia Gunter attended a meeting at the Education Department of the Museum of Fine Arts recently to discuss and evaluate the department's Gallery Contexts.

Calvin Burnett is represented in the current exhibition entitled "New England Blacks in the American Revolution" at the Boston Public Library, Copley Square, by the original of an illustration published in "Images" in March, 1974. Four of his recent paintings were selected for inclusion in the exhibition through March 6 at the Minority Community Cultural Center in Lynn.
